TechRelief Directory: global open source for technological solutions to combat COVID-19

Whether directly or indirectly, the impact of the coronavirus (COVID-19) is being felt around the world. To support the global response to this virus, the TechRelief Directory has been launched: an information source of potential risk-reducing and lifesaving technological solutions from around the globe across all industries and domains.

https://techrelief.global/

The TechRelief Directory is a free, open resource to help with the fight against COVID-19.
The growing utilization of technologies such as artificial intelligence, robotics, 3D printing, the Internet of Things, and advanced wireless technologies is playing an essential role in solving the critical challenges our global community faces today. By working together on a global scale, we can collectively address urgent needs and help create solutions in support of the fight against COVID-19.

It is essential that information about available technologies around the world is readily available to anyone that needs it fast. Many solutions included in the TechRelief Directory are already being implemented in the healthcare industry; other solutions may originate from other industries but have overlap with the medical domain. It is the intention that all technologies in the TechRelief Directory can either provide immediate solutions or are very close to being market ready.

We are calling on people, companies and organizations around the globe to contribute their technologies to the TechRelief Directory. From robots and drones to AI and 3D printing, there are many ways technologies may provide relief during the COVID-19 pandemic, including transport, disinfection, cleaning, medicine delivery, personal assistance, communication and telepresence, remote handling, ventilation, compliancy and security, testing and diagnosis, and laboratory automation.

The TechRelief Directory is initiated by Quasset, an innovation-focused asset management solutions and consultancy company. To help people and organizations around the world save valuable time and as a public service to the global civil society, a team of volunteers at Quasset took the initiative to create this directory. The team will continue to improve this source of information continuously, adding more functionality and information.
